

LIÉBANA

Picos de Europa

The district of Liébana brings together a series of natural, landscape, historical, and cultural attractions which make it one of the most popular rural tourism destinations in the region.

Delimited by the Cordillera Cantábrica and the Picos de Europa, the territory of Liébana is divided between the Nature Reserve of El Saja and the National Park of the Picos de Europa. These are two protected areas of great environmental value and host the habitat of species such as the Brown bear, the roe deer, and the capercaillie.

The preservation of their villages and traditions keeps alive outstanding ethnographical and architectural styles, and their gastronomy features some of the treasures of Cantabria's traditional cookbook.

PESAGUERO

Prado Ciqueras

In the heart of the Brown Bear Recovery Area, Pesaguero is a strategic starting point for numerous hiking routes. The Casa de la Naturaleza (Nature House) provides all the information you will need on the natural and cultural values of the Liébana Valley.

Moreover, a wide variety of civil and religious buildings of considerable historical value are scattered all over the area.

Potes

Potes, which is known as the town of bridges and towers, is where the four valleys of the Liébana district meet together with the Deva and Quiviesa rivers which flow through the town. Its streets display a wide and diverse offer of restaurants where the most traditional recipes of Liébana's cookbook, such as traditional stew, the game meat and delicious home-made desserts, can be tasted.

Tresviso

Tresviso is located on the western edge of Cantabria and is the only village of this upland municipality.

Its strategic location within the National Park of the Picos de Europa makes it a favourite destination for mountaineers and hikers.

Moreover, Tresviso is the home of the famous cheese, Picón Bejes-Tresviso, protected by an official Designation of Origin, which is made in the traditional manner and cured in the caves scattered throughout the municipality.

ACTIVE TOURISM

Horse trails

Its wide range of leisure and open-air activities make Liébana one of the key destinations for active tourism in the region.

Hiking, climbing, potholing, vias ferratas, mountain biking, or donkey or horse riding, cross-country skiing or snowshoes trails are only a few of the attractive proposals of the various villages and valleys of the district.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

The numerous vegetable gardens of the valley, which have been sown on a fertile soil full of natural richness, provide fresh and exceptional products, including highlights like bilberries, potatoes, red onions, collard and cabbage, green beans, lettuces and juicy tomatoes.

The famous local chickpea, similar in appearance to the Pedrosillo variety, deserves a special mention and is one of the star ingredients of the traditional Liébana stew.

The whole district also boasts a wide variety of fruit trees (apple trees, cherry trees, pear trees, hazel nut trees, plum trees, and walnut trees, among others) that fill the Liébana countryside with their colours and scents.

WINES, VINEGARS AND CIDERS

Vinegar of Liébana

Vineyards have always been part of the Liébana landscape in its lower valleys.

Protected from winds and storms by the Picos de Europa, these vineyards produce different varieties of both green and black grapes used to elaborate wines, mostly red ones, characterized by their shiny and fresh aspect.

The special microclimate of the Liébana region is also ideal for growing a delicious variety of apple, which is used to produce the region's famous natural cider, hand-made in its apple presses.

Moreover, the vinegar tradition of the Liébana area, originally focused on home consumption, has jumped into the market, producing and selling a sweet wine vinegar, which does not contain conservatives or chemical additives.

GRAPE LIQUOR AND LIQUEURS

The Liébana product par excellence, the origin of the grape liquor in the valley dates back to the 14th century.

Nowadays there are numerous varieties such as aguardiente (in its pure form), grape liquor with mountain tea (Sideritis hyssopifolia) or with coffee, honey, herbs, chamomile or cherries, etc., and although the production has been modernised, the essence of its tradition and production remained the same throughout the years, using careful distillation processes and selecting meticulously the raw materials.

Grape Liquor

Stills, skin, stems, distillation... remain terms with a historical link to the culture of Liébana.

Every second weekend of november the famous Grape Liquor Festival is held in Potes, this celebration was declared a Festival of National Tourist Interest in 2012.

HONEY AND JAMS

Liébana honey has recently been included on the European register of Protected Designations of Origin to acknowledge the quality of its single-flower varieties (heather) and mielada (oak, evergreen oak, heather, and blackberry honey). This local honey is used in a multitude of recipes and stands out for its delicious touch of freshness.

Moreover, in the woods, fields and vegetables gardens throughout the district are also cultivated bilberries, figs, apples, strawberries and other fruits used to make a broad range of home-made jams. Hand-made natural products, cooked on a low heat and with a unique personality, we can find delicacies such as strawberry, orange with grape liquor essence, greengage jams, together with red wine jam and fig with nuts cream, among a wide range of varieties.

CHEESES

Liébana is a district with a deep-rooted cheese tradition which was recorded as early as the 10th century. The home-made cheeses produced in the area are clearly distinct from those of other districts or regions. Cheesemakers in the region stand by their traditions and are still committed to making their products by hand in the traditional way used in the past by mountain herdsmen in the Picos de Europa.

This strong personality is evident in all the different varieties of cheeses produced in the towns and villages in the district. Picón Bejes-Tresviso and Quesucos de Liébana are two of the most famous examples. Both are protected by their official Designation of Origin.

The cheese acts as a dessert in its freshest and creamiest versions or as an appetizer or special ingredient in lots of recipes. Our wide range of over sixty different cheeses give the consumer limitless flavours and nuances, which make Liébana cheeses widely acknowledged for their qualities by aficionados of these delicacies.

MEAT AND SAUSAGES

Lamb of Liébana

The extensive woodland and mountain areas of the Liébana district, with its game reserve, provide local family businesses with a unique raw material which they use to produce the traditional home-made sausage out of game meat like wild boar, roe deer or venison.

If these game meats and their sausages are a well known aspect of local cuisine, this is particularly true of the chorizo of Potes, which is made in a traditional manner that makes it unique. Moreover, on the Liébana uplands local shepherds and stockbreeders continue to rear young lambs and kids which have become a top quality brand.

BAKERIES AND CONFECTIONERY

Frisuelos

Bread ovens are part of the traditional Liébana architecture and even today can still be found in many houses and constructions of the district. Bread baked in a wood-fired oven, tortos preñaos of chorizo, picón cheese, and pastry pies continue to be among the most popular products for visitors and neighbours alike.

Although this district is not known for its strong confectionery tradition, Liébana also has some traditional sweet-meats such as the terrónillas of Potes, which recipe includes the well-known Tostadillo wine; sequillos; toribiucas with Liébana grape liquor; and frisuelos.
